LIVE BAIT AND TIP-UPS. New Law Regarding Bait Worms. Applies Only To Chautauque Lake.

Albany, Nov. 28.—From the number of inquiries received by the Conservation Commission in reference to the use of live bait in tip-up fishing, there seems to be considerable confusion among the sportsmen in reference to this matter.

At the last session of the Joint Session an amendment was made to Section 232 of the Conservation Law permitting a person to use fifteen (15) tip-ups in Chautauque Lake, Chautauque county, such to contain but one hook and such hook to be baited with earth worms only.

This amendment has been the cause of the misunderstanding and the following are advised that live bait may be used as livebait in all other waters of the state where it is lawful to use tip-ups.

THE TIRED VOTER

Analysis of the vote cast at the November election in Ulster county shows the usual percentage of tired voters, who started off with the best of intentions but became mentally or physically weary before reaching the foot of the ballot. It seems beyond belief, but it is a fact that 977 voters took the trouble to go to the polls and cast their votes for Governor and then stopped right there, not voting for any other candidate. There were 1116 voters who cast votes for Governor and Justice of the Supreme Court and then left the other candidates to their fate. There were 1,116 voters who cared enough about the state to vote for Governor but apparently thought the office of Lieutenant Governor too trivial to notice.

A possible explanation of some of these failures to vote is that some voters are still of the belief that the old blank ballot is used and that one cross does for the whole ticket. This theory is weakened by the fact that after voting for Governor and skipping several offices, voters became interested again when they came to the names of the candidates for United States Senator, Sheriff and Justice of the Supreme Court and voted their choice for those offices.

The returns of the vote on the Volstead Law Referendum show great weariness on the part of voters, even after giving due allowance for the "strike" urged by the Christian and Anti-Saloon League managers. The total vote for Crisman was 2,761. Charging the entire Crisman vote off to the "strike," there were 3,146 voters who had a choice for Governor but did not vote on the Referendum.

In the city, where 869 votes were cast for Crisman, the total vote for Governor was 11,243, the total vote on the Volstead Law Referendum 10,923, a difference of only $10, and there was a total vote of 10,970 on the local theatre referendum.

The most notable conclusion seems to be that many voters will vote only on the things they are interested in and are too indolent to vote on the things in which they are not strongly interested—as, for instance, who will be the Governor of the state in the event the elected Governor dies, who has charge of the state's law business and finances. Which shows that a considerable percentage of the voters are not only lazy but ignorant or thoughtless.

A TERRORIZED COMMUNITY.

The mayor of Herra, Ill., has notified Governor Small of his conviction that the arrest and trial of the "gangsters" of "Bloody Williamson county" should be undertaken by the military arm of the state, inasmuch as "the gangs have reached such proportions that no sheriff, regardless of his efforts, can relieve the condition," and "no citizen will produce evidence while these gangs are at large for fear of their own lives being taken, and no prosecuting attorney could live who attempted it." The mayor has been criticized as "timid," but it looks as if it required considerable courage even to make this suggestion, knowing that the "gangsters" would hear of it.

At the time of the massacre of on-union miners three years ago, the unwillingness of citizens to give evidence was attributed to sympathy for those who might be found guilty. At the mayor's statement clearly indicates that they were also afraid for their lives. Military aid to the Williamson County authorities, including the establishment of martial law, has been given a number of times already without permanent triumph for law and order. No such lasting dominance of civilization as has ever been witnessed anywhere else in this country. The problem presented still appears as dire as before.

To world of moderns, brightened by productions of early civilization, let some cheer out of the darkness of the present. The world's supply of principal things will last less than thirty years.

years." Apparently there is nothing for motorists to do but to drive while they may—and certainly they are making every effort to get all the possible benefits within a given time.

Emil Ludwig's "William the Second," based largely on the archives of the German Foreign Office, is said to picture the exile at Doorn as "a neurotic from early childhood, swinging between delusions of grandeur and unmanly panic, swinging between pietism and the society of esthetic dilettantes and moral degenerates, visualizing himself as the dictator of Europe's fate and in reality the victim of his courtier's intrigues and lies; a would-be man of destiny without intelligence or courage."

That Body of Yours

By James W. Barton, M. D.

A POEM OF PURPOSE.

I am quoting the first verse of a little poem that appeared recently in a health magazine.

"Twas a dangerous cliff, as they confessed,
 Though to walk near its crest was so pleasant;
 But over its terrible edge there had slipped
 A duke, and full many a peasant.
 So the people said something would have to be done,
 But their projects did not at all tally.
 Some said, 'Put a fence around the edge of the cliff.'
 Some, 'An ambulance down in the valley'."

And a little further on in the poem we read "Gave pound or gave penny, not to put up a fence, but an ambulance down in the valley."

I am quoting this because we read from time to time of how hard the health officer of a community has to work to get the estimates passed, with which to carry on his work.

The alderman, or controllers, are quite willing to pass the estimates to keep the hospitals maintained. No poor man, woman or child, that is sick, is ever debarred from these institutions. The natural sympathy or pity for the afflicted enables that part of the estimates to be passed without trouble.

But the cost of preventive work, such as physical examination of all school children, the cost of giving medical and dental care and so forth, so that epidemics of diphtheria, scarlet fever, measles, which not only lay the child low temporarily, but are the chief causes of heart disease later on, is looked upon as just a trifle, that should not be permitted to waste the money of the citizens.

Fortunately some of these medical officers are good fighters or tacticians, and by hard cold facts show not only that health and lives, but that actual cash is saved to that community, by these methods of preventing illness.

The poem continues as follows:

"Are't we picking up folks as fast as they fall?
 Why should people of sense stop to put up a fence
 While their ambulance works in the valley?
 But a sensible few who were practical too,
 Will not bear with such nonsense much longer.
 They believe that prevention is better than cure,
 And that party will soon be the stronger.
 Encourage them then with your tongue and your pen,
 And while other philanthropists dally,
 They will scorn all pretense, and put up a fence
 On the cliff that hangs o'er the valley."

I believe my readers will agree that while the ambulance may sometimes be necessary, the fence, that is preventive medicine, is the logical, the sensible procedure.

TWENTY AND TEN YEARS AGO.

Overcoming Radio Interference

New York, Nov. 30.—Every broadcast listener can be his own committee to battle against interference in broadcasting.

Of course, in that capacity, he can stand up and yell blue murder. But that will not do much good, for him or anyone else.

There is a better way to achieve results in this critical (and very interesting, too) period through which radio is passing. It is all part of the game, and everything will come out satisfactorily to the interests of the public even if we have to wait a bit.

During the interim, fans may learn more about radio than they ever fancied they would or thought they would ever care to know, now that operating a set has become so simplified.

Perhaps they can eliminate a lot of congestion that is complained about. Joseph D. R. Freed, president of the Freed-Eisenmann Radio Corporation, states that a partial solution is to give additional study to the operation of receivers and the character and maintenance of installations.

Too Many on Same Wave.

Mr. Freed declares:
 "By general consensus of opinion, there are too many broadcasting stations transmitting simultaneously. This leads to interference, particularly as the wave-length bands are so restricted. That is especially true because many stations using the same or approximately alike wave-lengths, have increased their power. That means, chiefly at this season of the year, that they cause whistling and distorted reception, even though they may be 500 or perhaps 1,000 miles apart."

"Everyone knows the underlying reason for all this—lack of governmental power in the regulation of stations. Yet, even with governmental regulation, there is bound to be some clashing between stations because there are so many of them."

"The object is to reduce interference to a minimum, and that can be done solely through definite action by a legally constituted body or individual."

"In the meantime, fans are talking about the whistling noises they hear. Super-selective receivers tend to reduce these disturbances to a minimum, because tuning is so very sharp, but even the best of sets cannot cope with the trouble when two stations, on fair power, sending on the same wave-length, are on the air at the same time."

"Analyzing some of the letters published in the New York metropolitan district about interference reveals that there are facts and justice behind most of the statements dealing with changes in wave-lengths by certain broadcasters. But a lot of the complaints seem to be based on reasons that are not binding. Frequent reference to the jumbling together of four or five metropolitan stations is an indication of special causes for poor reception."

Aerial and Batteries Cause Trouble.

"Perhaps the aerial used is too long, or batteries are run down. These are two causes for bad tuning."

"It is well to do a little experimenting and also to go over the entire installation before protesting. 'An often quoted example of interference from stations far apart is that of WHT and WOR. They can, and should be separated. But it is impossible to do that with WHAP and WSB with the receiver in New York.'

"For the last two winters CNRO and WOS—one in Ottawa, Canada, and the other in Jefferson City, Mo., listened to in New York, indicated which might be expected in the way of heterodyning signals. Once or twice a week, they came on at the same time and a faint buzzing sound killed reception of either, both being on the same wave-length. And yet something could be done in that case, through change in the direction of the antenna."

Suggestions to Radio Owner.

"My advice, therefore, is to watch your tubes and batteries, keeping the 'A' battery fully charged and renewing the 'B' when run down, shorten the aerial or alter its direction, be sure that the ground connection is as near perfect as obtainable, and make all dial adjustments critically. If you are very near a powerful broadcaster, try the use of a wave-trap. This will do away with some of the interference, because tuning will be sharper, but it cannot eliminate it all. You will have improved reception, however, under difficult circumstances, and that should be a satisfaction."

"Keep a record of interfering stations, chiefly those on the same wave-length. The information is valuable to those who are seeking regulatory legislation, and it will be interesting to you personally in future years when the situation has been eased, one way or another."

Mr. Freed suggests that all fans write their congressmen regarding the need of adequate radio legislation, and that the time to do this is now.

Today's Story in New York History

By Frederic A. Godcharles.
 (Copyright, 1926, by the Author)

Cyrus W. Field, Author of the Atlantic Telegraph, Born November 30, 1819.

Cyrus West Field, great American merchant, promoter of submarine telegraphy and philanthropist, was born in Stockbridge, Mass., November 30, 1819. He was the son of the Rev. David Dudley Field, D. D., and grandson of Captain Timothy Field, an officer of the Continental Army in the Revolutionary War.

He was one of four brothers, who all attained distinction, the other three being David Dudley, the eminent jurist, Stephen J., United States Supreme court justice, and Henry M., the clergyman and author.

At the age of fifteen Cyrus came to New York and obtained a position with A. T. Stewart & Co., at a salary of $50 per year, and before he was of age went into business for himself in the manufacture and sale of paper, and soon was at the head of a prosperous business.

The project of carrying a telegraph line across the Atlantic Ocean was suggested to him during a conversation, in which his aid was solicited for the construction of a telegraph route across Newfoundland.

The young New York merchant acted promptly and went to Peter Cooper, Moses Taylor, Marshall O. Roberts and Chandler White, who met at Field's house, and devoted the four successive evenings to a study of the work. It was decided that Mr. Field go to Newfoundland, a journey which resulted in the grant from the local legislature of the exclusive right for fifty years to establish a telegraph from the continent of America to Newfoundland, and then to England. He also obtained fifty square miles of land for the terminal station, and some additional financial assistance.

Mr. Field and his four associates then organized the New York, Newfoundland and London Telegraph, on May 6, 1854, with Peter Cooper as president and the other four as directors of the company.

For twelve years Mr. Field devoted his time exclusively to the "cable." He visited England, solicited financial aid and finally subscribed, in his own name, for a one-fourth interest in the company.

Several unsuccessful efforts, were made to lay the cable, but finally communication was established, when on August 5, 1858, Mr. Field telegraphed from Newfoundland the safe arrival of the ship and the success of the enterprise. The whole country was excited. The respective shore ends were laid, and on August 16 the connections were completed, and the message from Queen Victoria to President Buchanan flashed across, beneath the waters of the sea.

Just as Mr. Field was being tendered orations by his fellow-countrymen, and the entire nation rose up to do honor to the Atlantic telegraph and its author, it gave its last flash and then went to sleep forever in its ocean grave.

It takes a long time to recover from a great disaster, but Mr. Field would not yield. The Civil War occupied the attention of the country for several years, and it was impossible to proceed with the work. Mr. Field made repeated visits to England, and delivered addresses on both sides of the Atlantic.

Finally, in 1865, active measures were renewed, and the steamship "Great Eastern" began the delivery of the cable. At midocean, after 1,200 miles had been laid, the cable parted, and the vessel returned to England.

In 1866 another expedition started, and on July 27 telegraphic communication was established between the two continents, and has not since been interrupted. The broken cable was also recovered and completed.

Congress voted Mr. Field a gold medal and the thanks of the nation. He was also honored in England and France. He received the thanks of the city of New York, with the freedom of the city in a gold snuff box. In 1869 Mr. Field was the representative of the New York Chamber of Commerce at the opening of the Suez Canal, and was afterward interested in cable-laying between Europe, India, China, Australia, the West Indies and South America. He became interested, in 1876, in the development of the system of elevated railways in New York.

In 1880-81, after fifteen years of unceasing toil, crowned at last by success, he and his wife made a trip around the world. On his return he obtained concessions from the Sandwich Islands for a cable from San Francisco to the islands.

Mr. Field owned a valuable property at Tarrytown, N. Y., and a few years before his death erected a monument here to Major John Andre, of Revolutionary fame, but the monument was first partially, then wholly destroyed by dynamite by persons unknown.

His last days were clouded by severe domestic afflictions. Prior to his death he gave his collections of medals and paintings relating to the laying of the Atlantic cable to the Metropolitan Museum of Art, in New York city.

Mr. Field died July 11, 1892.

Rattlesnake Hill Clear of Reptiles

Surveyors Plotting New State Highway Route Become Modern St. Patricks—A Country School Instructed With Hatters.

Swain, N. Y., Nov. 30 (AP).—Modern St. Patricks are ridding Rattlesnake Hill, near here, of the serpents responsible for its name.

Surveyors who came through the section recently to plot the route of the new Garwoods-Dalton state highway began an offensive against the reptiles which was continued by the country folk with the result that large numbers of the snakes have been killed.

Rattlesnake Hill is heavily wooded, rough and steep, and has a southern exposure which delights the rattlers. They lived virtually unmolested for generations, and multiplied to the point where they ruled the land, for the difficulty in climbing over the rocks and through the brush and the fear of the snakes kept all but snake collectors away from the hill. In a number of instances the reptiles have been known to travel across the country road to the neighboring farms, becoming in late years something of a nuisance to the farmers.

Many stories are told of the rattlers. One of the best concerns a young woman school teacher who on a crisp morning a few years ago built a fire in the old district school on the hill. As the temperature in the room rose the snakes were aroused from their lethargy and began their exit through the holes and cracks of the building. When the teacher had counted 39 rattlers she excused her pupils, deserted the school house and never could be persuaded to return.

The natives, although admiring the coolness with which the surveyors despatch the reptiles they meet, use their own methods. They wait until after a killing frost and then, while the snakes are still sluggish, go to the dens and kill the rattlers with clubs. One party recently found and killed 43 snakes in a rocky den. On another day eight dens were raided and several scores of serpents were slaughtered.

Owing to the drastic offensive now being waged it is believed that by the time the new road is completed there will be little danger of meeting a rattlesnake. The highway will take motorists through the Canaseraga Creek valley, one of the scenic spots in this part of the state.

Tumble of Human Fly Wins Chicago Wife

Detroit.—Though a serious performer of daredevil stunts, Benjamin Koppelow Fox, a "human fly," seemed just the least bit nervous while he was being married to Miss Naa H. Clifford by Fred E. DeCaw, justice of the peace. Fox, who is twenty-seven years old, met Mrs. Fox when she was a nurse in the Mercy hospital in Chicago six years ago. He was taken to the hospital after a fall from a building he was climbing.

It was necessary for Fox to procure a special order from Probate Judge Edward Command directed to the county clerk before a marriage license could be issued. Fox was unaware of the five-day marriage law, and as he is required to leave New York city at once on his way to Paris, it was essential that he obtain the special dispensation.

STUDENT NOW HUNTING OLD PAL WHO GAVE HIM HAZARD

Thrashing Turned Fortune's Wheel for Henry O'Reilly, Who Wins to Shake Tormont's Hand.

New York.—Having made $175,000 in three years selling real estate, Henry O'Reilly of New York city has begun an unusual journey with his wife and baby son, Donald. He has sailed for his old home in St. John, Newfoundland, to shake the hand of the man who kicked him into the lap of fortune.

Fourteen years ago, when O'Reilly was an honor student at St. Bonaventure's college at St. John, his Irish blood rebelled at having, and he sliced his razor across the face with a carving knife. For that he received such a beating that he could not leave his bed for two weeks.

That beating, administered by one of the students at the college, proved the beginning of the turn of fortune for O'Reilly. He left the college, went to sea, fought through the war in the English navy, and then came to this country. He married. Yet three years ago the O'Reillys still were "broke." Then came their tremendous prosperity with the boom of Long Island real estate, which O'Reilly was selling.

"I might have kept on being just as poor as my father if that brother at college hadn't given me the worst beating of my life," O'Reilly said. "Hold it against him? No, I am going back to shake the hand of the man who kicked me into the lap of fortune."

Judge Suspends Fine to Allow Honeymoon

New York.—Because he was arrested for speeding, James Patrone failed to enjoy his honeymoon after his marriage to Miss Anna Penzo, he told Magistrate Glatzmayer in Traffic court.

Patrone was arrested by Patrolman Fischer. He pleaded with Fischer not to give him a summons, explaining he was speeding because of his desire to give out invitations for his wedding. Magistrate Glatzmayer asked Patrone if he had married and received an affirmative reply.

"Where did you go for your honeymoon?" asked the magistrate.

"Well, judge, I was so worried about this case that I didn't dare take a honeymoon. We stayed home and saved money for the fine."

"How much did you save?"

"I've got $50 in my pocket now," Patrone answered. "If it's more I'll have to go to jail."

Whereupon the magistrate suspended sentence and told Patrone to use the $50 for his belated honeymoon.

Lodge Door Lock Plays Trick on Card Players

Milwaukee.—"Honestly, m'dear, I went to lodge last night."

This was the cry of seven members of the Merrill Park camp of Modern Woodmen when they tried to explain to their respective wives just how it was that they got home so early in the morning.

The seven, Harry Lantry, George Stagg, Martin Weyer, Alexander Richter, Julian Komman, William Koch and Charles Bollen, gathered in a back room of the meeting hall on Milwaukee and Wells streets after the regular lodge session for a game of whist. They forgot to take their keys with them and so, when they found that the janitor had locked them in, it took some time before they could force their way to a telephone and appeal for aid.

Famous Hen Dies After Laying Her 1,744th Egg

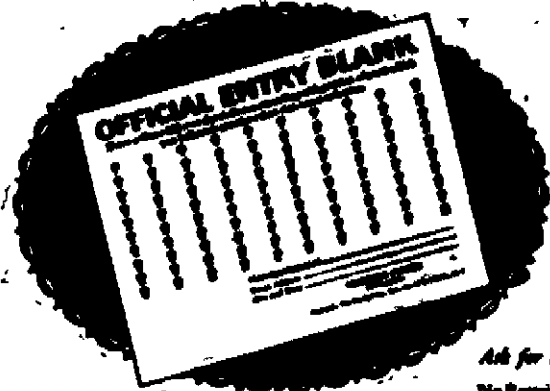

Peaslee, Cal.—Queen of Poultry, record-breaking hen, was found dead recently under an orange tree in her private courtyard at the poultry plant of the Famous Poultry company here shortly after she had laid her 1,744th egg. Death was due to natural causes. Two weeks ago, the Queen completed her fifth year of egg production with a new world's record of 1,687 eggs, compared with the average production of a hen in the two years of the 1920's of 250 eggs. All of the Queen's eggs were used for hatching, her owners declaring that she paid 12 per cent on an investment of $2,000 during her lifetime.

WHEN BETTER AUTOMOBILES ARE BUILT
BUICK WILL BUILD THEM

No Engine Fumes in Buick closed cars

In the 1927 Buick, the new Vacuum Ventilator pulls engine fumes and gases from the crankcase and ejects them outside the car.

This vital new Buick improvement does away with noxious odors. It adds greater luxury and pleasure to enclosed car operation.

Close the windows tight, drive the car at any speed, and prove to yourself that the Buick engine never contaminates the air you breathe.

The Vacuum Ventilator serves another very important purpose. With it, crankcase vapors have no opportunity to condense and dilute the oil. Owners of 1927 Buicks are advised to drain their crankcase oil only 4 times during the year.

For luxury, and for economy, own a Buick. Come in today and see what we mean when we say: "The Greatest Buick ever built."
